FROM THE PRESIDENT

Dear Colleagues,

This is my last letter as President of the Charleston County Bar Association, and it has been a very great privilege to serve. I would like to take this opportunity to thank the many people who helped make this year a successful one for the Charleston County Bar and its members.

Over the past few years, the Charleston County Bar has updated its By-laws, made the website more accessible, and provided benefits to members, such as frequent CLE's and discounts at local businesses, in addition to providing opportunities to socialize and network with other members of the Bench and Bar. We could not have made progress like this without the efforts and hard work of many members of the Board, Committees, and the Bar at large, and I sincerely thank everyone who has helped.

There are lots of ways to become involved with the Bar, and more members than ever have stepped up this year. We have provided community discussions on a number of topics affecting average people within our community. We have provided monthly CLE's for members of the local Bar, and a more informative website for both Bar members and the public. We have also sponsored and/or participated in Bar basketball and softball leagues, the Waties Waring statue dedication, and Judge Bruce Howe Hendricks' appointment as a federal Judge.

I anticipate that our President-elect, James Myrick, will continue to promote strong, positive interaction with our local community while providing forward-thinking leadership. We encourage everyone to offer suggestions, volunteer to teach a CLE in your practice area, start a volunteer project, or find a meaningful way to contribute. This Bar is made up of intelligent, talented individuals – together, we do make a difference.

Best regards,

Natalie Parker Bluestein

PRO BONO MOMENTS

By: Marvin H. Feingold, Esquire
Director

(Charleston) Pro Bono Legal Services, Inc.

Charleston Pro Bono Legal Services is now in its tenth year of service to people who desperately need legal assistance in civil matters. People with means hire lawyers as a matter of course when things happen in their lives that require legal expertise. At such times we would not long consider entering the legal arena without such competent assistance. When the option to obtain such advice is not there, the consequences can be dire.

Throughout this past decade the Charleston County bar has been generous with the practitioner's dearest commodity, a lawyer's time. Hundreds of Charleston attorneys have volunteered legal assistance on behalf of eligible clients and by their service, saved many homes and families. The Charleston Bar and individual attorneys and firms have also shown their commitment to the Pro Bono cause through the monetary contributions which is the Program's lifeblood.

By the time this is published, we will have had a successful auction of fabulous items at the CCBA Holiday Bash. We, of course thank the high bidders who walked away with such wonderful items as a week-long stay at a Wild Dunes beach house, or a Paris apartment (that's France not Texas) or some great bling. The auction could not have been done without the help of Rosen Litigation Technology Consulting who provided the audio-video support or without Cruz Chevrolet and their auctioneer in residence Ken French. Last but not least we are grateful to the donors of the items auctioned. To all of these individuals and organizations, we thank you for your support of Pro Bono Legal Services.

Our New Year's resolutions include, inter alia, sprucing up the office; there's been talk of a need for a more cheerful ambiance, painting the walls, etc. If you've not been to the Pro Bono office on Church Street, we are bare bones interiors inc., comprised of donated and hand-me-down, unmatched furniture. If your firm has office furniture to get rid of, please consider giving us an early pick of things. Same for selected office supplies.

ADOPTEES AND THEIR FIRST BIRTH CERTIFICATE

By Ruth W. Cupp

Family Court judges in this state recently have signed Orders permitting their adult adoptees to acquire a copy of their first birth certificate. The number of these requests appears to be increasing not only in this state but across the United States.

These states that have enacted legislation allowing adult adoptees to see their first birth certificate are: Maine, New Hampshire, Alabama, Oregon, Illinois, Tennessee, Georgia and Kansas.

Rhode Island enacted this legislation, but with the condition that the petitioner must be twenty-five years of age. Just this year, the state of Colorado passed an act that allows every adult citizen to see their first birth certificate.

The state of Washington legislators enacted this legislation, but added this caveat, "unless the birth parent has filed an affidavit prohibiting release."

New Jersey passed this new act, but it does not go into effect until 2017. The state gave biological parents until January 1, 2017 to redact their names if they choose.

In Indiana, an adoptee must wait until the birth mother is deceased. These states will allow access with a court order: Kentucky, California, and North Carolina.

Since the 1930s, New York state has denied all adoptees access to their original birth certificates. In June of 2014, its legislature again debated a bill to give all adoptees access to their original birth certificates but there were not enough votes for it to pass.

"My original birth certificate sits in a building in New York and I am not entitled to it," quoted Maureen Sheridan in the New York Times in June of this year. "Adoptees in New York can also seek their biological parents through the state's mutual consent registry – but critics say doing so rarely results in a match," added that newspaper.

In response to that N.Y. newspaper story, letters from adoptees were printed.

“This isn’t about balancing rights of parties. Adopted people have a right to their full identity, like every other American...This is about people who had no say and in their adoption simply having a right to know who they are, to know their genetic heritage.”

Another letter to the editor said, “New York’s out dated approach to adoption amounts to a violation of adoptees’ civil rights...It is highly unlikely that confidentiality was promised by the officials involved.”

“It is generally agreed that most jurisdictions would allow access via court order even though some standard must be met to obtain the order, such as a “compelling need,” said Thomas P. Lowndes, Charleston adoption attorney and former president of the U.S. Academy of Adoption.

That statement by Lowndes refers to the 1981 case of Bradey versus Children’s Bureau of South Carolina, S.C.21378. 274 S.E. 2nd. 418 in which the Court held that a “showing of “good cause” was required of the plaintiff to make a “demonstration of compelling need for identifying information.”

It appears that some Family Court judges in this state at this time are not requiring a stringent definition of a “good cause.”
